

Jane C. Loeffler Collection of Research Papers on American Embassies

The Jane C. Loeffler Collection of Research Papers on American Embassies is a unique assemblage of articles, notes, correspondence, clippings, publications, drawings, photographs, negatives, slides, and other reference materials she used throughout her professional career and research work. Throughout her career, Loeffler explored the interplay architectural design of American embassies, the evolving legislative policies of the embassy building program, and the political ramifications of embassy construction, beginning with the inception of the U.S. embassy building program. With much of the material inaccessible elsewhere, this collection is larger than other such archives, including that of the U.S. State Department. The basis for the series and order was developed from Loeffler's own organizational system from her personal reference archive and, for the majority of the collection, her folder titles have been maintained and material sorted accordingly.

Please Note: Embassies are located only in capital cities while consulates can be located in any city. However, for simplicity, this collection denotes consulates, ambassador residences, and other affiliated structures as embassies.
