Papers of Konstantin N. Gavrilov (1901-63), consisting of diaries, documents, and photographs. Gavrilov worked as an engineer in the Soviet Union before World War II; worked for Germany during the war; and eventually emigrated to Australia. Most of the diaries are from the post-war period; a few concern the 1917 revolution and World War II. There are many photographs from the interwar Soviet Union, when Gavrilov lived in Stalingrad. Among the documents are Gavrilov's personal documents from the Soviet period, from the Second World War, and from the post-war years, when he was a displaced person in Germany.
